Headline:
Very cold for many tonight. Chance of snow Sunday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Wintry showers in north and east, and a few showers western Wales and Cornwall. Otherwise generally dry with clear spells and icy patches before a new area of rain and snow arrives in the far northwest later. Becoming less windy.

Sunday:
Rain and snow over northern Scotland sinking slowly southwards and easing. Some light rain for Northern Ireland. Much of England and Wales fine though some showers on exposed coasts. Cold.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Cold and bright start on Monday, otherwise cloudier and milder than recently with rain spreading southeast across all areas. Turning colder again on Wednesday with blustery showers.
